

Give Hope This Thanksgiving by Donating Blood

American Red Cross thanks all presenting donors with a free pie at participating blood drives

ARCADIA, Neb. (Nov. 4, 2009) – While Thanksgiving is a time to give thanks, it can also be a time to give hope to patients who rely on donated blood. This Thanksgiving, the American Red Cross is thanking blood donors for giving hope to patients in need by offering all presenting donors a free pie at the Arcadia blood drive during the week of Thanksgiving.

“Blood donation is a simple act that helps save lives,” said Tricia Rubens, CEO of the local Red Cross Blood Services Region. “It only takes about an hour and gives patients and their families hope during the holiday season.”

Recipients of blood products are not able to take a holiday from needing lifesaving blood. They are in constant need of a healthy supply. Please take the time to give thanks by giving blood this holiday season. You could change a life, starting with your own.

About the American Red Cross

Governed by volunteers and supported by giving individuals and communities, the American Red Cross is the single largest supplier of blood products to hospitals throughout the United States. While local hospital needs are always met first, the Red Cross also helps ensure no patient goes without blood no matter where or when they need it. In addition to providing nearly half of the nation’s blood supply, the Red Cross provides relief to victims of disaster, trains millions in lifesaving skills, serves as a communication link between U.S. military members and their families, and assists victims of international disasters or conflicts.
